1. According to a refugee who served as a town official in Kaliningrad (Koenigsberg) after the arrival of the Russians and who bases his statement on the fact that he counted ration books, the population of Kaliningrad sank to 50,000 in the fall of 1945. Later it declined to 22,000.

14 January 1947

2. According to residents in East Prussia, the number of Germans remaining in Kaliningrad is about 25,000, compared to about 380,000 in 1937.
